

Cyber Security Assessment Health Check for SME businesses

CHUBB®

The Privacy Amendment Bill 2016 was passed by Parliament earlier this year. From March 2018, organisations that suffer a cyber breach will be required to notify the Privacy Commissioner.

Breaches may include incidents such as ransomware and malware, trojans, inadvertent loss of data through email and hacks.

To prepare for the new regulations, Australian companies should thoroughly review the cyber health of their business and remove any vulnerabilities that could lead to breach notifications.

Large corporations and government bodies have long used cyber health checks to improve their resilience to cyber attack. But with experts predicting that 40% of small to medium sized companies in Australia will experience a cyber extortion attack in 2017¹, it is important that SME business owners ensure they have adequate resistance to cyber attacks to reduce the likelihood of a breach.

Chubb has partnered with specialist cyber security vendor, Sententia, to offer Chubb Cyber insured clients a 10% discount on a 'Cyber Security Assessment Health Check'.

Sententia will provide an in-depth report into an organisation's cyber security health including the identification of potential vulnerabilities and recommendations on how to remediate any shortcomings.

Benefits of a cyber assessment

- An easy to read report prepared by a cyber security expert
- Dedicated focus on SME businesses (revenue up to $500m or less than 1000 employees)
- Identification and recommendations for improved resilience to cyber attacks

Cyber Security Assessments Reports

Sententia's report will offer a snapshot of the organisation's information security environment and present a set of recommendations for addressing detected shortcomings and concerns.

This includes:

- Threat detection findings from bots, viruses, malware and intrusions
- High risk application events
- Endpoint security findings
- Data leakage and data loss findings
- Compliance analysis
- Bandwidth analysis
- Remediation recommendations

10% discount for Chubb Cyber insured companies available until March 2018.
