

Employed Lawyers Liability Insurance

In-house does not mean immune to a lawsuit.

CHUBB®

The increasingly vital role played by in-house counsel also comes with malpractice risks. A legal malpractice (professional liability) lawsuit not only threatens the company's balance sheet, it can also place an in-house counsel's personal assets in jeopardy.

What your company needs is an insurer that understands in-house counsel risks, especially in today's complex legal environment. As one of the first insurers to offer employed lawyers liability insurance, Chubb is both committed to, and held in high regard by, the in-house legal community.

Building on this expertise, Chubb created ForeFront Portfolio Employed Lawyers Liability Insurance specifically for private companies like yours.

Why Your Company Needs Employed Lawyers Liability Insurance:

- A malpractice lawsuit may result in losses of hundreds of thousands or even millions of dollars.
- Provincial Law Societies and State

- Bar Associations may require inhouse counsel to carry professional liability insurance if they are deemed to be providing legal advice to third parties. These professional corporations may require in-house counsel to disclose to clients that they carry E&O insurance.
- Your in-house counsel does not have to do anything wrong to be sued. A large proportion of lawsuits may be meritless but must still be defended.
- In Chubb's experience, defence expenses typically comprise most of the costs associated with professional liability lawsuits.
- Other insurance policies your company may have, such as directors and officers liability or employment practices liability policies, generally do not provide coverage for:
 - Rendering professional services or legal services.
 - Counsel who are not also officers of the company and other legal staff
 - Legal services for uninsured corporate entities, such as holding companies
 - Disbarment or similar disciplinary proceedings
 - "Internal" claims
