Market Commentary

The war in Europe has shaken the global market where investors tried to hide in safe-haven assets like US Treasury. The US Treasury yield curve has become flattened due to the higher short and medium-term rate expectation. INDOGB also inched up but in a moderate shift than US Treasury. Domestic investors especially banks are still the biggest buyers of INDOGB. We see the pattern where banks can become the largest INDOGB buyer will be the same this year despite higher loan growth and a new policy on higher reserve requirement ratio. This is because the deposit has been growing at a higher rate than the loan. Currently, Indonesia possesses a stable currency due to the current account surplus and low reliability on foreign ownership.
