

Foreign Package

Religious Organizations & Educational Institutions

CHUBB®

During a school sponsored trip to China a young girl contracted a life threatening disease. The girl survived but suffered long term disability. Ultimately, a United States jury found the school liable for failing to take basic safety precautions to protect the children in its care.

A scenario like this may be preventable if the sponsoring organization has access to country-specific risk information and takes proper precautions before commencement of a trip. And for those inevitable situations which cannot be prepared for or occur despite diligent preparations, around the clock access to quality medical care and supervision may help reduce the severity of injury and loss.

The risk management services offered through Chubb Small Commercial Insurance's (SCI) foreign package policy are designed to provide religious organizations and educational institutions information to prepare for the foreign risk exposures their employees, students, or volunteers may face when traveling abroad.
